FAQ

Using Voice Messages

WhatsApp voice messaging allows you to instantly communicate with contacts and groups. It provides an enriching chat experience, and you can use it to deliver important and time-sensitive information. As such, all voice messages are downloaded automatically.

To send a voice message

1. Open a chat.
2. Tap and hold the microphone  and start speaking.
3. Once finished, remove your finger from the microphone . The voice message will automatically send.

While recording a voice message, you can slide left to cancel it.

To record a longer voice message:

1. Open a chat.
2. Tap and hold the microphone  and start speaking.

FAQ

While recording a longer voice message, you can tap CANCEL to cancel it.

Note: On some phones, you might have to wait for a second before speaking if the beginning of your message isn't recorded.

To play a voice message

Tap Play  to listen to voice messages you've sent or received.

Hold the phone up to your ear to play the message through your phone's speakers or hold the phone away from your head to listen to the message on speakerphone. When headphones are plugged in, voice messages will always play through your headphones.

On received voice messages you'll see:

- A green microphone  on voice messages you haven't played.
- A blue microphone  on voice messages you've already played.

On sent voice messages you'll see:

- A gray microphone  on voice messages your recipients haven't played.
- A blue microphone  on voice messages your recipients played.

Voice Messages 2.0, Secret Chats 3.0 and...

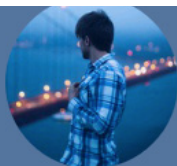

Voice messages on Telegram just got a completely new interface with waveform visualizations, a brand new player and raise-to-speak functionality.

You can now start listening to a long voice message and switch to other media or chats. The message will continue playing in the background. For who are we to defy the god of multi-tasking?

New looks for voice messages

Recording and listening to voice messages got easier with raise-to-speak and raise-to-listen. When a chat is open, bring your phone to your ear (as if taking a phone call) to listen to new voice messages or record a new one after the signal.

Dude, did you know you can use Raise to Sneak to record voice messages? 🤔

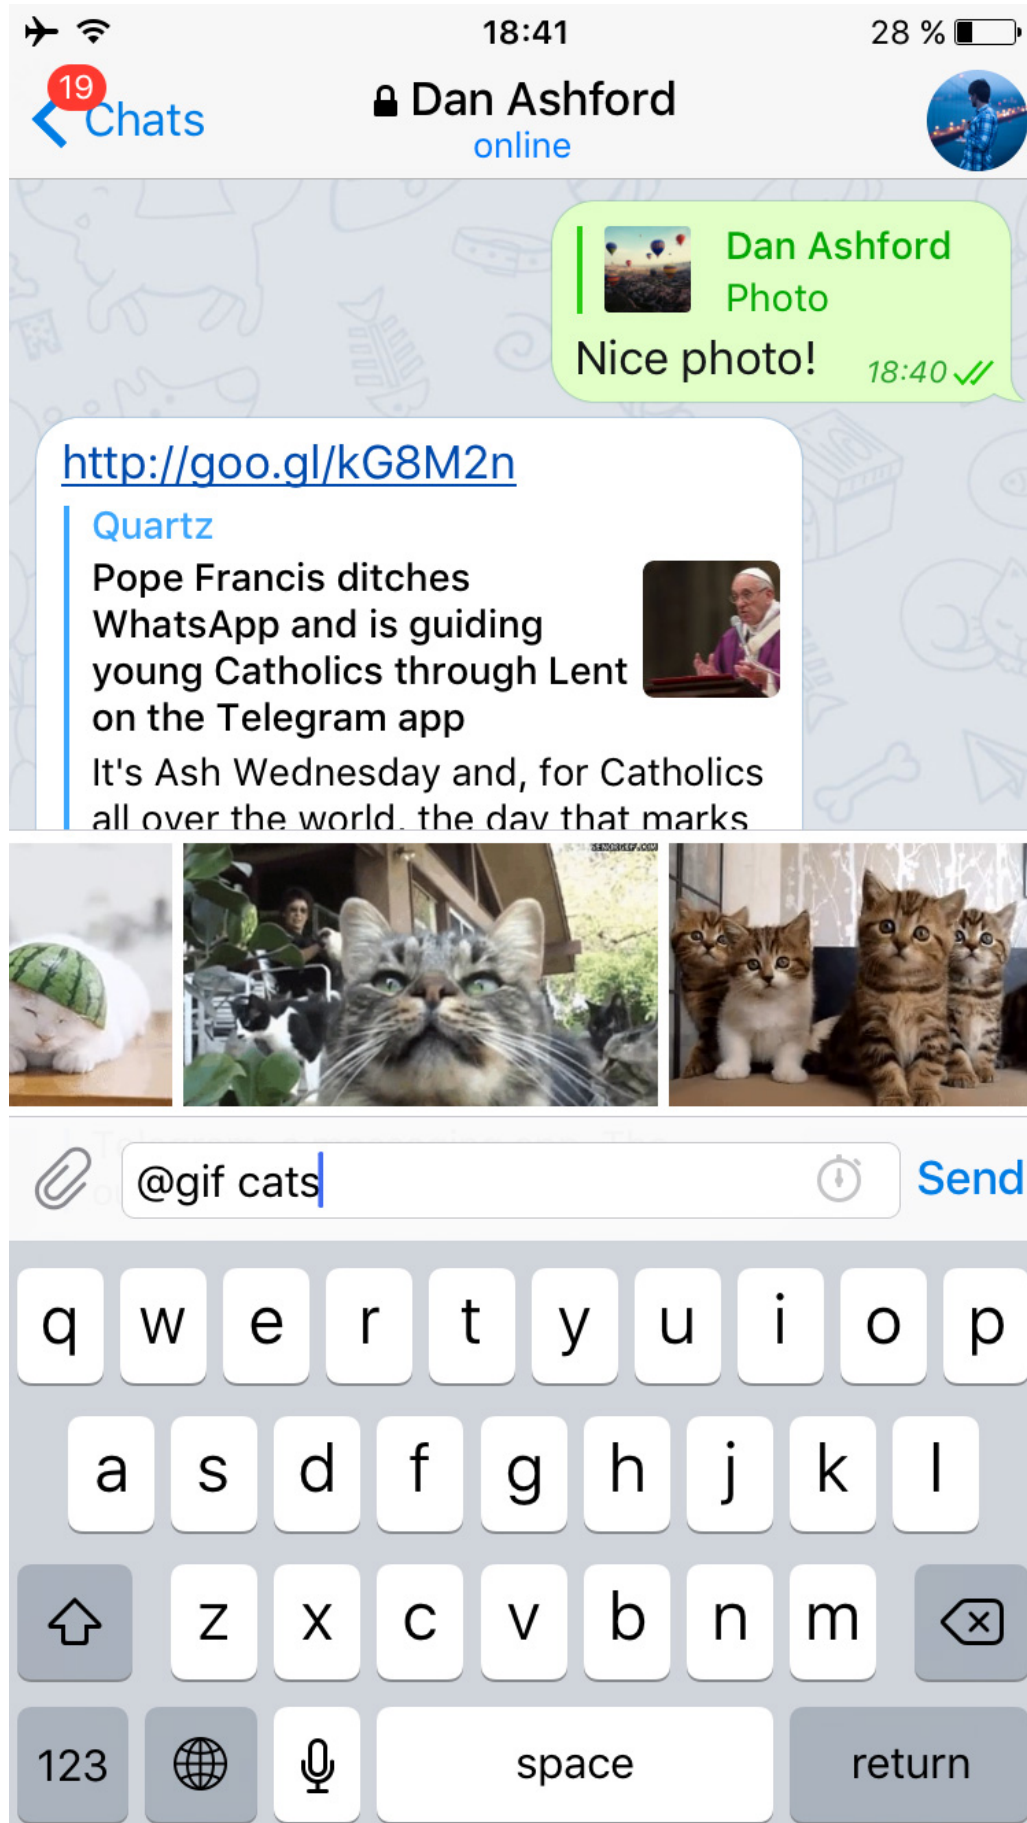

Raise to Speak: Preview before sending

This feature involves plenty of behind-the-scene magic with proximity sensors, gyroscopes and accelerometers. It works well with most modern devices, but is still experimental. Some phones may require arcane intervention from our devs.

Secret Chats 3.0

With their self-destruct timers and end-to-end encryption, secret chats are a great way to pass sensitive information. Today we're bringing the best features from cloud chats over to secret chats: detailed link previews, replies, photo and video captions, sticker sharing, inline bots and GIFs. We've also improved key visualizations to make secret chats immune to potential alien invasions.

A Secret Chat full of new goodies

...and...

Privacy. When overly active friends start adding you to random groups or channels, it gets overwhelming quickly. Now you can decide who may add you to groups and channels with granular precision. E.g. "All my contacts. Except those two."

Supergroups. Supergroup creators also get more control. They can now change who may add new members to their group: all existing members or only selected admins. Supergroups can have up to 1000 members, and finding a balance between order and chaos is important if you want them to grow.

Sharing extension. Sharing on iOS devices has become way smoother. You can now share any photo, video, audio, document or location to any Telegram chat or channel straight from default iOS apps like Contacts, Maps, Voice Memos and Photos. It is also possible to share stuff to several chats or channels at once.

Attachment Menu. Media files will zoom beautifully when you select them in the attachment menu. Note that we've moved 'Image Search' to the 'Photo or Video' section (tap the magnifying glass icon in the top right corner).

Hotkeys. iPad users with external keyboards get hotkey support. Now you can navigate chats and send messages without ever touching your iPad's screen. Saves a lot of time.
